Yale

April 2020

Dear Yale Graduate,

The Yale Corporation—the university’s board of trustees—plays a key role in furthering Yale’s mission and continued excellence as a global research university deeply committed to teaching and learning. In the seven years that I have been president, this small yet diverse group of dedicated volunteers has helped to shepherd a major renewal of the university’s academic and administrative leadership, overseen the inception and completion of transformative facilities projects, and guided the development of our academic strategy for the decade ahead. Yale’s trustees are vital partners in our work to strengthen the university and serve the world around us.

Each year, you and your fellow graduates are charged with electing a new trustee for a term of six years. This is an important responsibility. I encourage you to read the following materials carefully and then to cast your vote for one of the candidates. Each of these impressive individuals would contribute an important set of experiences and skills to Yale’s endeavors.

Sincerely,

The individual receiving the highest number of votes will become the newest alumni fellow of the university's board of trustees, serving a six-year term beginning July 1, 2020.

The Alumni Fellow Nominating Committee, a standing committee of the Yale Alumni Association, is composed of graduates from across the university's schools and departments as well as university administrators. Each year, the committee nominates exceptional leaders with the knowledge and skills to serve the Corporation's governing and advisory activities in support of Yale's mission. To create diverse and well-balanced leadership, the committee identifies individuals whose expertise and experience complement those of current trustees. After soliciting nominations from the alumni community and university leaders, the committee has selected the following candidates for the 2020 ballot:

MAURIE MCINNIS '90 M.A., '96 PH.D.
Austin, Texas

CARLOS R. MORENO '70 B.A.
Los Angeles, California

Please read the biographies of these two alumni – and of the current trustees – that are included in the following pages, and then cast your vote. This is a significant opportunity to contribute to the life and future of our university.

According to the University Charter, all graduates of Yale College who have held their degrees for five years or more, all alumni of the graduate and professional schools, and all recipients of Yale honorary degrees are eligible to vote in the election. ## THE YALE CORPORATION

The Yale Corporation, or board of trustees, is the university's principal governing body.

As fiduciaries, the trustees ensure that Yale's academic and administrative leadership are guided by sound policies and practices, and equipped with adequate resources, to further Yale's mission. In this work, they balance the needs of today's faculty, students, alumni, and staff with those of future generations.

The Corporation is comprised of the president and sixteen trustees: ten appointed successor trustees, each limited to two six-year terms; and six elected alumni fellows, chosen by alumni for staggered six-year terms. Successor trustees and alumni fellows carry the same responsibilities and duties. In addition, the governor and lieutenant governor of Connecticut are board members ex officio. The Corporation has thirteen standing committees with responsibilities outlined in the by-laws.

The Corporation convenes in person several times a year to review and discuss issues with Yale's academic and administrative leaders, and to vote on matters such as faculty and senior leadership appointments, the conferral of degrees, major building projects, and operating and capital budgets. During and between meetings, trustees consider issues of strategic importance, offer guidance, and gather information that supports the stewardship of the university.

While on campus, the trustees meet with members of the Yale community, including faculty, staff, and students. Some meet formally, in regular meetings with student government and faculty; and others informally, at lunches, university teas, and campus events. Off campus, trustees represent the university at events and engage on issues of importance to Yale and higher education in general.

UNIVERSITY MISSION STATEMENT

Yale is committed to improving the world today and for future generations through outstanding research and scholarship, education, preservation, and practice.

Yale educates aspiring leaders worldwide who serve all sectors of society. We carry out this mission through the free exchange of ideas in an ethical, interdependent, and diverse community of faculty, staff, students, and alumni.

CANDIDATE

MAURIE MCINNIS

'90 M.A., '96 PH.D.

Maurie McInnis — recently announced as the next president of Stony Brook University, a public research university on Long Island, New York—is well versed in the imperatives of higher education. Currently the executive vice president and provost of the University of Texas at Austin, McInnis oversees academic programs spanning the university's libraries, museums, and eighteen colleges and schools. Since her appointment in 2016, she has expanded interdisciplinary research across schools, convened faculty and student task forces to help strengthen career development and graduate education programs, and spearheaded a university-wide action plan for diversity and inclusion. All of these initiatives, McInnis says, lie at the heart of higher education—a university's mission to “create new knowledge, drive innovation, and educate students.”

The seeds of McInnis's career in academia took root thirty years ago and more than 1,500 miles northeast of Austin when she enrolled at Yale as a doctoral candidate in art history. Earning her Ph.D. at Yale “was a remarkable graduate experience,” spent working in the Yale University Art Gallery and the Yale Center for British Art, studying with “stunningly amazing faculty,” and introducing undergraduates to art history through the university's collections. Her six years in New Haven, McInnis explains, “clearly shaped the kind of scholar I ultimately became.” Recognized for her research into the cultural history of American art, she is the author of several acclaimed books on slavery, race, and power in the antebellum South. She has also curated several exhibitions and worked with museums and historical sites including Mount Vernon, Monticello, and the Museum of Early Southern Decorative Arts.

McInnis also has long ties to the University of Virginia, where she earned her bachelor's degree and later spent nearly two decades as a professor of art history. During that time, she held roles as varied as director of American studies and associate dean for undergraduate academic programs, ultimately rising to the position of vice provost for academic affairs. As vice provost, she led strategic planning efforts to strengthen residential culture and student engagement—including the implementation of a holistic advising system—and chaired a committee to update the university's process of academic program review. She also led approval processes for new academic programs, oversaw institutional compliance and accreditation, and collaborated on a new enrollment management strategy. She has served on the boards of the Virginia Foundation for the Humanities, the University of Virginia Alumni Association, and the Texas Exes Board of Directors. She will assume the Stony Brook presidency in July.

As a prospective alumni fellow, McInnis sees an opportunity to contribute her perspectives both as a graduate alumna and as an expert in higher education—a vantage point that allows her to speak broadly to Yale's leadership in the field. She is eager to support Yale's work “at the forefront of moving disciplines and knowledge creation forward.”

McInnis and her husband, Dean McWhorter Johnson, have two children: Ian, a sophomore at Princeton University, and Fiona, a high school sophomore. The family enjoys traveling together, and in her rare moments of leisure time, McInnis rows single scull crew on Lady Bird Lake in Austin.

CANDIDATE

CARLOS R. MORENO

'70 B.A.

In the decades since Carlos Moreno graduated from Yale, the pursuit of justice has been his life's work. After leaving New Haven, he received his J.D. from Stanford Law School, practiced law, was a prosecutor for the Los Angeles City Attorney's office, and spent fifteen years as a trial judge before serving on the Supreme Court of California from 2001 to 2011. From 2014 to 2017, he served as the U.S. ambassador to Belize, focusing on citizen security, economic development, and other foreign assistance projects. He currently works as an independent mediator with Judicial Arbitration & Mediation Services (JAMS), serving clients in the state of California.

A first-generation Mexican-American and fluent Spanish speaker, Moreno was the third Latino to serve on California's Supreme Court. During his tenure, he authored more than 140 majority opinions in cases ranging from LGBT rights to arbitration to insurance coverage. He has been recognized for his advocacy for gender equality, the rights of children and the disabled, and diversity in the legal profession. The Hispanic National Bar Association (2009) and Mexican American Bar Association Foundation (2011) both have honored him with lifetime achievement awards.

Moreno arrived at Yale in 1966, a member of what he describes as a novel and diverse undergraduate class — one that reflected major changes on campus and in society. It was, he recalls, “a real adventure. Yale was changing, not only in its student composition and background, but also in its acknowledgment of itself as an institution at the forefront of rapidly evolving national and international issues.” Having planned initially to major in English, he soon changed course, ultimately earning his bachelor's degree in political science. As influential as his studies were to his thinking, the community he discovered along the way would, in many ways, have an equally significant impact on his path after college. In his senior year, Moreno became one of the founding members of MEChA de Yale, a student organization dedicated to social justice for those from underrepresented backgrounds. And over the fifty years since he received his diploma, Yale and its alumni have remained fixtures in Moreno's life.

In 2009 Moreno was awarded the Yale Medal for his service to the university "with distinction for close to four decades in many volunteer roles," including as a longtime member of the Alumni Schools Committee, as part of the Yale Alumni Association Board of Governors, and as a co-founder of the Yale Latino Alumni Association. In 2019 he was the keynote speaker for MEChA's fiftieth anniversary, bringing his 1969 MEChA gavel with him.

A self-described "objectively reasonable optimist," Moreno views the role of alumni fellow as an opportunity to support Yale's academic and community priorities, and to reinforce the university's commitment to being "emphatically student-centered." That emphasis, he says, was emblematic of his Yale experience. For Moreno and his fellow students, "Yale was transformative, and Yale itself was also transformed."

Moreno's family includes his wife, Christine, a former community college art professor, and their three adult children: Keiko, Nicholas, and Heather, formerly their niece.
